

The money that the biggest companies can offer a station owner who's selling is often too hard to resist. I think keeping a tighter limit on the number of stations companies can own improves our chances of developing diverse markets.